Latino Flavor Spices Up September at Pacific

Ashley Elefant
Staff Writer

September 15 marks the beginning of Pacific's fifth annual Latino Heritage Month; a month long celebration in honor of Latino culture and history. However, this month is not just about the history.

It is also about the present Latino influence in our society today.

The University of the Pacific had the first Spanish-speaking college, Elbert Covell College, and currently over half of the University of the Pacific population is Latino.

It is the objective of Latino Heritage Month to educate the Pacific population about this section of our community.

As International Studies professor Dr. Bigler points out, "In all of the country, but especially where we live in San Joaquin County, Latino culture is an integral part of our society. Our heritage is Hispanic and this is something we cannot forget".

The celebration is intended to teach all students about the various different Latin American cultures.

During this four week period, almost all of the major Latin American countries celebrate their independence and national pride.

Over 20 different events will take place over the coming month.

These events range from keynote speakers, to panel discussions, to weekly Latino dance lessons at the Baun Fitness Center.

Students are encouraged to attend as many events as possible.

There will be a raffle for a free Ipod at the end of the month for students who have attended at least 7 events.

Pacific will be hosting three speakers involved in the Latino culture.

The first keynote speaker, Mexico's Consul General in Sacramento, Carlos Gonzalez Gutierrez, will be speaking in the Raymond Lodge at 5 p.m. on September 17.

There will be a short reception followed by a presentation in which Gonzalez will be discussing the 200th anniversary of Mexican independence as well as the current relationship between Mexico and the United States.

The second keynote speaker will be Dolores Huerta, the cofounder of the United Farm Workers and a prominent Chicana labor leaders in the United States.

Huerta has spent over forty years fighting for the justice and dignity for immigrant and migrant workers, and will be returning to Pacific for the second time in recent years to tell her story.

The final speaker will be Venezuelan political and international statesman, Eduardo Fernandez.

Fernandez will be discussing the importance of civic involvement and discussing his important role in the democratic opposition to Chavez authoritarianism in Venezuela.

In addition to these three keynote speakers, Latino Heritage Month will also sponsor a four-part series about immigration.

Each part in the series will begin with a free lunch at 11:30, followed by the presentation at noon.

The series will include, among other topics, a presentation on the myths and realities of immigration by USF law professor, Bill Ong Hing, and a special panel discussion about the immigration problems currently in Arizona.

Dolores Huerta will be the second of three keynote speakers of Pacific's celebration.

With all of the media covering the immigration problems in the United States, it is crucial for one to be educated about the topic so that they can distinguish between the facts and the myths.

The Latino Heritage Month committee encourages everyone from the community, not just those of Latino heritage, to come out and participate in all of the wonderful events planned over the next four weeks.

For more information about the Latino Heritage Month events, stop by Callison Lodge (located behind Bechtel International Center) or check out all of the calendars posted around campus to find out dates, times, and places of the events. Pacific Alumni Tackles Sharks, Business and Sustainability

Josh Chipponeri
Contributing Writer

On Tuesday September 14th in the DeRosa Center Ballroom, Les Fields ('72) spoke to a crowd of Pacific alumni, students, faculty and staff about his experience at Pacific and how that helped him shape his future.

In his time here at Pacific he was a football player, a fraternity brother, and a business student.

When speaking to a crowd of at least 160, Mr. Fields shared that music and art have always been his passions.

It was as a scuba diving photographer that he went into the world to pursue his passions.

He brought photographs of naturally artistic images captured from his time as a former Aqua Trek employee.

He articulated how he worked to develop an environmentally sustainable business model.

Through simple principles, and what he described as "A lot of luck" Fields found success through innovation in the scuba diving industry and pioneering the business of shark wrangling.

He did make a poignant point about the cruelty of shark finning and how he has been combating that practice his entire career.

The presentation was compelling and found great depth in specific ways in which his time invested here at Pacific enabled him to his definition of success.

In closing he made a resonant call to the need for American ingenuity and innovation in developing nations, and that success begins with respect.

Farmers Market Promotes Seasonal & Local Choices

Valley produce available for purchase by the DUC

Danielle Procope
Staff Writer

You've probably noticed stands of fresh, mouthwatering produce on your way to the UC. It is there every Wednesday afternoon and it is here to serve us, the community of the University of the Pacific. It our Farmers Market.

The Farmers Market is a collection of stands of fresh fruits and vegetables that are locally grown.

The San Joaquin Valley is rich with farmland and a number of local farmers come to Pacific to sell every week. There is a great variety of produce available; everything from tomatoes, peppers, and cilantros to herbs like basil and thyme.

By supporting the Farmers Market, Pacific students support Stockton. At the Farmers Market, farmers are able to directly make money off of what they grow.

Farmers Markets help keep the revenue from the produce here in the city where it can help to expand local farming businesses and create jobs.

There are also financial incentives for the consumer. The food consumers buy from Farmers Market will oftentimes be the same price or less expensive than the same produce would be at local supermarkets.

Apart from financial inducements to shop at Farmers Markets, there is also the issue of health.

"It is not easy to find produce that is planted without the use of pesticides or herbicides," Eric Firpo, a seller at Pacific's Wednesday Farmers Market and owner of Stockton Harvest (stocktonharvest.com) said.

Firpo also said that "the produce consumers buy at the Farmers Market will be fresher because it comes straight from the field to the stands in a fraction of the time as it does from the field to the shelves in supermarkets".

Adrienne Kaspar, a graduate Pacific student said, "I am a regular customer here because I can talk to the person who grows the produce I eat."

"I like the variety here and I also like that I am buying in season," he said.

Next time you're walking to the UC on a Wednesday afternoon stop buy and check out the Farmers Market and discover its ripe produce.

Staff, students and public gathered to celebrate the end of Ramadan and discuss the recent aggression toward US Muslims.

Pacific Challenges Islamic Discrimination

In a response to the current attacks on American Muslims including Quran burnings in Florida, the University of the Pacific hosted an event Sunday.

According to the statement put out by the University, the event was held "to demonstrate our commitment to a peaceful, ecumenical world, and to support and honor our students and the multiple faith traditions at Pacific and in the area."

Over 100 people attended "Answering the 9/11 Call: Be the Change 2010," which took place in front of the DeRosa University Center.

Students and staff addressed the crowd about the issues facing Muslims today and lead prayers.

Some of the speakers included sophomore and treasurer for Pacific's Muslim Student Association Hamza Siddiqui, Pacific's visiting multi-faith chaplain, Deborah Conrad, assistant anthropology professor Ahmed Kanna, Rabbi Andra Greenwald from Congregation Beth Shalom in Modesto and political science professor Brian Klunk.

The event, which was organized a week in advance, also included a chicken barbeque and ran from 4:30 to 6:30 pm.

AFRICA

NIGERIA -- According to Nigeria's finance minister, the country's economy is projected to grow by 10% by the end of 2011.

The country's infrastructure and privatisation program that is drawing in international investors is said to be the force behind the economic increase.

Arunma Oteh, Nigeria's chief financial regulator told press on Monday that the key to sustaining an economy for "the ordinary citizen of Nigeria" will be its diversification from oil exports.

LATIN AMERICA

CUBA -- In an attempt to boost the economy, the Cuba has set a plan to cut one million public sector jobs. About 85% of the population currently works in the public sector.

The workers who lose their jobs are encouraged to become self-employed or work for private businesses.

According to the Cuban labor federation, "Job options will be increased and broadened with new forms of non-state employment, among them leasing land, co-operatives, and self-employment, absorbing hundreds of thousands of workers in the coming years."

MIDDLE EAST

ISRAEL -- A nanny from India was awarded honorary Israeli citizenship for saving a young boy during the Mumbai terrorist attacks in 2008.

Sandra Samuel rescued two-year-old Israeli Moshe Holtzberg, who she found next to the bodies of his parents.

Samuel was also personally given a certificate of bravery from Israeli Interior Minister Eli Yishai.

EUROPE

FRANCE -- France's Senate passed a bill on Monday that bans wearing an Islamic full veil in public. The bill would also fine anyone who forces a woman to wear a burqua-style veil $38,400.

The Senate voted 246 to 1 for the ban, which will come into effect in 6 months if the country's Constitutional Council confirms its legality.

PERSPECTIVES

REPUBLICAN VS. DEMOCRAT

Seperation of Church and State

Republican

Morgan Hendley
Staff Writer

In this week's column, I will be writing about Muslims and the supposed separation of church and state. I will begin by covering some of the basic methods that are employed to determine the boundaries between church and state.

The first is the Lemon Test which was established and defined in a Supreme Court ruling in 1971 to be constitutional, a law must: have a secular purpose, and be neutral towards religion - neither hindering nor advancing it, and not result in excessive entanglements between the government and religion. The Endorsement test was created by Justice O'Connor and states a law is unconstitutional if it favors one religion over another in a way that makes some people feel like outsiders and others feel like insiders. Throughout The United States' history, we see laws that are geared to ensure that the U.S. government neither promotes nor hinders religion; and to ensure that religion does not interfere or tamper with government happenings.

However, in the past decade or so we see these institutions are being trampled on by the donkeys of this nation regarding Islam.

Muslim prayer rooms, Muslim foot-bathing areas, Muslim sensitivity training, a taxpayer-funded trip for Imam Abdul Rauf to the Middle East to discuss Muslim life in America and religious tolerance, and a taxpayer funded Islamic center at a Marine base are being established throughout the United States. According to World Net Daily (WND), Kansas City International Airport (KCI) built accommodations for Muslim cabdrivers and other Muslims that include special prayer areas and special bathrooms that were constructed especially for those of the Muslim faith to wash their feet and prepare for prayer.

A myth that many liberals would argue is that the building of foot-bathing areas (totaling more than 200-300 dollars per area) and prayer rooms are funded privately by the airports. This is wrong, funding for such areas are taken directly from airline fees; so funding is far from private. Why doesn't the airport accommodate Christians, Catholics, annual trip to Mecca. An organization called CAIR (Council on American-Islamic Relations) works with the FBI, airports, the military, and other such Government institutions to implement this Muslim sensitivity training.

Another wrongdoings of the liberal elites is the establishment of a taxpayer funded Muslim centers at our Marine bases. This is a building that was revamped to accommodate the Muslim marines so that they could hold religious services.

Jewish, Buddhists, or other religions? Why doesn't every religion get a special place to wash and a quiet place to pray? Why is the government spending hard earned money on promoting Islam?

Another stunning issue is the Muslim sensitivity training. According to WND, Muslim sensitivity training is also done at KCI which ensured training of 45,000 workers on how to avoid offending Muslims and what to expect during their

This is rampant reverse discrimination and the liberal donkeys refuse to see this because they are participating in a race to the tolerant top to see which liberal can be the most tolerant and accepting of the Muslim faith so that they might get some sort of award or pat on the back. The new Muslim center at the Quantico, VA military base was hailed in with a dedication ceremony complete with a plaque and a recitation from part of the Quran. (Just let me remind you that if Christians so much as say "God Bless You" or utter the words "Under God" we are immediately chastised and promptly reminded of the separation of church and state).

Governments on every level, local, state and federal, supposedly do not promote or hinder faith, but then why are they rampantly favoring the Muslims? If the liberal government continues to allow this sort of promotion of the Muslim faith then all groups equally should have prayer rooms, and special areas designated for the practice of their faith, and these too should be paid for with government funding.

And on an ending note I have one begging question that I would greatly appreciate an answer. Why do liberals love much to promote a religion that opposes their beliefs? Muslims are against homosexuals (gay rights), abortion, and women's rights. Women and homosexuals are persecuted in the Middle East. Why then do the donkeys of this nation favor and promote a religious group that contradicts their own beliefs? And "tolerance" is not the answer I am looking for.

Christiana Oatman

Perspectives Editor

"The purpose of separation of church and state is to keep forever from these shores the ceaseless strife that has soaked the blood of Europe for centuries," James Madison once wrote. When our country was founded, the writers of the Constitution specifically wrote in the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof..." The United States was unique at the time for its government's insistence on not having a state religion and creating a place where anyone was welcome no matter what their faith was.

Despite what many conservative politicians like to believe, the majority of the founding fathers were deists and didn't believe in the Christian God, yet they wrote a document that allowed Christianity to flourish in the United States and become an extremely influential faith, not just in American society, but in American government.

This may sound like a great idea—a country where religion does not control the government, where anyone can practice what they believe in peace—but it's rarely the reality. Christianity has dominated this country's politics for centuries.

Just look at all our presidents; all of them were somehow affiliated with a traditional Christian denomination. Interestingly enough, the further back in history you go, the more likely you are to find presidents who criticized Christianity and identified as deist, Unitarian political climate if a president was elected that didn't want to swear on the Bible, the religious right would have his or her head on a platter. Even our current president identifies as Christian and was part of the United Church of Christ denomination for twenty years, yet the religious right insists on spreading a rumor that he's secretly Muslim because of his liberal views, race and middle name (Hussein). Not only do they like to spread the lie that he's Muslim, but they present it in a way that having a identify as Christian, and most of that percentage belong to politically conservative denominations. They want prayer back in schools, abortions outlawed and they want to prevent same sex couples from getting married, and to hell, literally, with anyone who doesn't believe what they believe.

Because of the large number of Christians and the many who support the "religious right" no other religion has any political power. The controversial and heavily publicized "Ground Zero mosque" in New York is not the only instance of Muslims being told they shouldn't build a place of worship where they want to. "This year, at least six mosque projects in the U.S. have faced bitter opposition," according to a Time magazine article.

No one's trying to stop Christians from building churches and no one threatened to have a mass Bible burning ceremony, even though Christianity has just as much a history of violence and intolerance as Islam does. Christians have so much power and privilege in this nation, and so many of them aren't even aware of it.

Instead, members of the "religious right" whine about how people want to take "under God" out of the Pledge of Allegiance (the phrase wasn't even part of the original pledge, it was added during the Cold War so the country could distinguish itself from Communist countries).

And, feel discriminated against and say there's a "war on Christmas" going on during the holiday season when people try to say "happy holidays" instead of Merry Christmas or put up a menorah next to a nativity scene or don't include any religious holiday symbols in decorating—not everyone celebrates Christmas, but most people celebrate some kind of winter holiday!

Part of the discrimination against Muslims is out of sheer ignorance. In a recent TIME poll, only 37% of Americans said they know a Muslim American. 46% believe Islam is more likely than other faiths to encourage violence against nonbelievers. Republicans have been outraged by Muslim sensitivity programs.

It's unfortunate that these programs have to be put in place, but when a group has been repeatedly discriminated against, something has to be done to fight against hatred and stereotypes.

Similar programs are in place throughout American schools to prevent bullying, especially against LGBT (Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender) students. It's uncertain whether or not they work, but Christian Americans are accustomed to having major political influence and when they live in places in our nation where they don't have to interact with those who are different from them, they feel totally free to interfere in another faith's attempt to exercise their freedom of worship.

"Islamophobia has become the accepted form of racism in America," said Muslim-American writer and commentator Arsalan Iftikhar, as quoted in Time magazine. "You can always take a potshot at Muslims or Arabs and get away with it." Even in Europe, anti-Islam sentiment has materialized, such as the infamous ban on burqas that was just confirmed in France.

Islam isn't the most socially progressive religion ever established—their laws are made to control women and restrict their rights and Muslims, just like Christians, believe being LGBT is immoral, but not all Muslims are the extreme jihadists that many Christian Americans like to portray them as.

Almost all powerful religions have created misery and killed hundreds in the name of their deity, and all religions—those with global power and influence and those without—should be free to worship where and how they please in the United States.

or simply irreligious. Every single one of them swore on a Bible when they were inaugurated and in today's Muslim president would be something terrible.

With people like Glenn Beck, Rush Limbaugh, and Sarah Palin telling people how to vote and what to think, it would be next to impossible to elect a president who was actually Muslim or even one who was actually atheist or one who was gay. At this rate, a Jewish president would even surprise me.

The "religious right," a phrase coined in the 1980s and started by Jerry Falwell but is now continued today by politicians and commentators like Mike Huckabee and the aforementioned Beck, Limbaugh, and Palin, is made up of various groups that often associate with the Republican Party and that have been pushing a Christian fundamentalist political agenda for centuries. They're not satisfied with the fact that according to a 2002 Pew Research Council survey about 82% of Americans

Tiger Talk: Ezra Gonzalez

Where are you originally from?

Newark, California; in the Bay Area. I consider myself a Bay Area guy. I have lived all over the Bay Area; I have lived in San Francisco and now I'm living in Newark. I have experienced both sides of Bay Area living- the suburbs and the city. My Dad is actually from San Francisco and my Mom is from El Salvador. I'm "puro americano."

What are you studying?

Business Administration in Marketing, I would like to one day head a marketing team for a professional sports team.

What is one word that would define you?

Character. I aspire to have character, I want to be the same person every day. With me you get no fake faces or masks. It is my hope that people see the same me all the time.

What do you see yourself doing in 5 years?

Announcing the 2010 Fall Survey

The Pacifican Lifestyles section is proud to announce the 2010 Fall Survey covering campus life, culture and styles. Have questions you want to see on the survey? Email: Pacificanlifesty@pacific.edu

In 5 years, I would see myself working in Athletics as a graduate assistant in the Eberhardt School of Business. Hopefully, I want to have the same confidence and security in myself that my younger brother had. I want to reach that relative level of maturity.

What do you focus on in your spare time?

I focus on playing music, I play the bass guitar, and soccer, if anything. Both transcend me into peace, into my zone, It's my personal safe haven.

Who is your greatest influence?

My mother. When I think about my mother, I think about my entire childhood. Everyday she would pick a theme and carry it out through the whole day--life lessons. The reason I am in school because of and for my mom.

Who inspires you today?

My brother. He died two years ago and he's the driving force behind what I do. He gives me the force to do or attain whatever I want. Thinking of him inspires me to do anything.

How would you define your life philosophy?

Live one day at a time. I got that from my brother. Not worrying about the troubles of the future of the past.

What is your favorite dish?

I'd like to say I don't have a favorite dish. My mom used to say that "Ezra's the kid where you could put rocks on his plate and he'd at least suck on them"

What type of music inspires you?

Music is my passion, I love it all. I have yet to find a genre of music I don't like.

Is there anything you want the Pacifican community to know about you?

If you need a friend or a meal buddy or just wanna chill come and find me.

What is one of your biggest goals or dreams you are personally focused on? If you can share...

My biggest goal is living in Spain, working for Atlético Madrid--just the thrill of living in Europe, the atmosphere of European professional soccer, everything. It's the career I want to be in for the rest of my life.

Do you have items you must leave the house with?

I need my keys, my cell phone and my string back pack.

If you see it, you'll eat it

According to Brian Wansink, author of "Mindless Eating", the two things that influence most are eating are visibility and convenience. Wansink placed candy jars in employees cubicles for a month. Then he moved the candy six feet away. Simply having the candy closer meant the workers ate 5 more pieces of candy a day. That adds up to a 12-pound weight gain in a year.

Since convenience can trump visibility, make sure healthy foods are easy to find. If you find yourself being distracted by treats on your desk, pantry, or refrigerator, move them! If chocolate cookies are your downfall, place them in the back of the pantry. That way they won't tempt you each time you open the door. Same goes for ice cream in the freezer and chips on your desk.

Other tips are to focus on your hunger levels before indulging. Hungry? Dig in! Just keep it to a modest portion. Remove a serving from the container and savor the treat. You'll be less likely to overdo it and be more satisfied with your treat.

Pacific Women's Soccer Falls to Stanford

Athletic Media Relations

The Pacific women's soccer team fell at No. 2 Stanford, 4-0, Sunday afternoon in the Nike Invitational at Laird Q. Cagan Stadium.

The Tigers fall to 2-4-1 on the season with three losses to opponents ranked in the Top 25, including two in the top 10. Stanford improves to 4-0-2 on the season.

Stanford used its speed advantage to out-shoot Pacific 24-5, however the Tiger defense limited the Cardinal to seven shots on goal.

"I'm proud of the effort we put in," head coach Keith Coleman said. "They're a very good team, and they scored three really nice goals. It wouldn't have mattered who was in goal. They are an incredibly athletic team. And they just ran and ran and ran. It was No. 2 at their best today."

"No one is playing the schedule that we're playing right now - four games against ranked teams in a stretch of five matches," he continued. "We play these games to learn about ourselves and see our weaknesses before conference play. It's been a tough stretch, but we're learning more about our team than we ever would by playing an average team and winning 3-0. Now we have two weeks to fix those weaknesses before the start of Big West play."

Pacific posted a pair of shots on target, one each from junior defender Laura Hogan and junior midfielder Nydia Ramos, but Stanford goalkeeper Lindsay Dickerson, who took over from starter Emily Oliver in the 63rd minute, stopped both shots to split the shutout.

The Cardinal opened the scoring in the 17th minute, as Mariah Nogueira found the back of the net with a short-angle shot after a cross from Christen Press. Press set up a second Stanford goal just over six minutes later, playing a ball from the right side to Teresa Noyola in the middle, who finished to the left side of the net from point-blank range.

Noyola set up the third Cardinal goal in the 30th minute, finding Allison McCann in the middle who one-timed a shot from 15 yards out for a 3-0 lead.

Pacific redshirt senior goalkeeper Jill Medigovich made a pair of saves in the first half, before giving way to freshman Tashia Long. Long faced a pair of shots in the second half, with the Cardinal adding their fourth goal in the 58th minute.

Rachel Quon scored from the right side, making a run to the net and accepting a pass from Camille Levin.

"It was good to be able to get Tashia Long in the game against a team like Stanford," Coleman added. "She played significant minutes against a very good team, and that experience will help her down the road."

The stretch against ranked teams for the Tigers continues next weekend as Pacific is back in action on Sunday, Sept. 19 at No. 18 California in a 1 p.m. kickoff.

Women's soccer continues to remain hopeful for the remainder of the season.

Women's Volleyball Receives Votes

Athletic Media Relations

For the first time in two seasons the Pacific women's volleyball team is receiving votes in the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) Top 25 poll. Released on Monday, September 13, the Tigers picked up nine points in the poll, picking up their first points in the poll since the October 8, 2008 poll when Pacific received eight points on the strength of their schedule. At the top of the poll sits Stanford which took over the top spot from Penn State.

Playing against some of the toughest team in the country in the 1st month of the 2010 season, the young team has proven to be among the upper echelon of the Division I world boasting a 6-2 record through eight matches. The Tigers have posted three wins against teams in the AVCA poll this season with their biggest victory coming last weekend against then No. 24 Arizona. In addition to their win against the Wildcats, the Tigers have wins against Texas A&M and Santa Clara, two teams who were receiving votes in the poll at the time of Pacific's win.

PacificTiger www.hollywoodtoday.net

Pacific will be back in action on Friday, September 17 when they take on Utah in Tempe, Ariz. at the Arizona State Tournament. The game is scheduled for 5:00 PM.

Today In Sports History

Honoring Amos Alonzo Stagg

Chris Sabalbro
Staff Writer

Fifty years ago today, Amos Alonzo Stagg walked away from the game of football.

On September 16, 1960, "The Grand Old Man of Football" announced his retirement as a football coach after 70 years of contributing to America's gridiron sport. He was ninety-eight years old.

Stagg coached the Pacific Tigers' football team from 1933-1946. During that twelve-year span, Stagg recorded 60 wins and 77 losses to finish his Tiger tenure with a .441 winning percentage.

In 1988, Pacific Memorial Stadium was renamed Amos Alonzo Stagg Memorial Stadium to dedicate the man. The

and a coach.

But Stagg did more than just play and coach. His innovations include the lateral pass, the tackling dummy, the fake punt, the quick-kick, and the backfield shift. He also added the padded goal posts and numbers on uniforms.

More than fifty-one years ago, Stagg High school was dedicated and named after the football pioneer. Just last Friday, September 10, 2010, Stagg High played their first football game in their newly built on-campus stadium.

Even though Stagg passed away on March 17, 1965, his legend still survives in Pacific sports' history.

An Update on the Season

Athletic Media Relations

The Pacific field hockey team had their highest scoring effort of the year, but it was not enough to overcome a balanced Maine attack as the Tigers fell in the Catamount Classic 7-2 Sunday, September 12th in Burlington, Vt.

In the 54th Minute, senior Sarah Miceli (Los Gatos, CA) took in a pass from sophomore Jenna Vivian (Gilroy, CA) and put the Tigers on the board. Four minutes later, sophomore Emily Trudeau (San Jose, CA) took a shot off a penalty corner that was deflected. Vivian gathered the rebound and scored.

For Maine, Kelly Newton had a seven point day with three goals and an assist. Maine improved to 4-2 on the year, while Pacific fell to 0-6.

Junior defender Amanda Spellman (Gilroy, Calif.) was named to the Catamount Classic All-Tournament team.

The Tigers return home and will prepare for their second Nor-Pac Conference game of the season, when they travel to Berkeley to take on Cal Saturday, September 18th at 12 p.m.
